Physical Description: xii, 472 pages, 6 unnumbered pages of plates ; 24 cm. Description: Archaeological Chemistry VIII This paper reviews briefly the early history of archaeological chemistry, concluding that it is to be traced back to Revolutionary France and the last decade of the 18th century. This period saw a unique combination of the perfection of gravimetric means of chemical analysis and an interest in the contents of the 'cabinets of curiosities' of the day, which included archaeological objects ...
