Toshimori, Kiyotaka: Books Dynamics Of The Mammalian Sperm Head: Modifications and ... GPI protein modifications at the sperm surface may well be associated to polarity dynamics of the sperm plasma membrane. 2.3.4. Glycolipid binding proteins and ZP binding. Male germ cells of mammals contain a sperm specific glycolipid called seminolipid (for review see). Dynamics of the mammalian sperm plasma membrane in the ... The structure-function relationship of sperm has been studied from various viewpoints. Accumulated evidence has shown that the sperm components undergo sequential changes from the beginning of spermatogenesis to the time of fertilization/embryogenesis. Structural analyses have been performed using various new techniques of light and electron microscopy as well as immunohistochemistry and immunocytochemistry in combination with specific probes such as antibodies against sperm components. Mammalian spermatozoa have complex structures. The structure-function relationship of sperm has been studied from various viewpoints. Dynamics of the Mammalian Sperm Head: Modifications and ... Abstract. Sexual reproduction requires the fusion of sperm cell and oocyte during fertilization to produce the diploid zygote. In mammals complex changes in the plasma membrane of the sperm cell are involved in this process. Sperm cells have unusual membranes compared to those of somatic cells. After leaving the testes, sperm cells cease plasma membrane lipid and protein synthesis, and vesicle mediated transport. Dynamics of the mammalian sperm plasma membrane in the ... membrane, the outer acrosomal membrane (OAM), the inner acrosomal membrane (IAM) and the nuclear envelope (Fig. 1a). The plasma membrane fuses with the OAM at the anterior acrosomal region during the acrosome reaction; however, the plasma membrane and OAM at the equatorial segment are not involved in the membrane fusion during acrosome reaction. Dynamics of the mammalian sperm membrane modification ... The Mammalian Sperm Epigenome Epigenetics (from “epi” in Greek which means above/upon/near) is the study of heritable changes in gene expression that are not caused by modifications in the primary DNA sequence (Goldberg et al., 2007).
