Series 1 was announced. It was in appearance a more modern machine than the M but this cosmetic treatment was only in line with current trends to hide the working parts with styled sheet metal. The engine was basically the same but with speed increased from 700 to 750 rpm. Provisions for power starting were also made by modifying ... Yesterday's Tractors - History of the Field Marshall Tractor The Field-Marshall tractors were commonly used to pull agricultural machinery such as threshing machines from site to site. Once in place, the Field-Marshall would be used as the powerplant for the threshing machine, the tractor's belt pulley coupled by a large flat drive belt to the threshing machine's pulley. Field-Marshalls with tracks were produced under the Fowler brand name, being ... Use the download link to download the file to your computer.
