harm is an ever-present reality of our globalised world. Over the last 20 years, criminologists have made great strides in their understanding of how different institutions in society, and criminal justice systems in particular, respond (or fail to respond) to the harm imposed on ecosystems and their human and non-human components. EPrints Emerging from environmental criminology is the study of geography of crime.

Geography of crime addresses the ways spatio-temporal patterns produced through the interactions of people, society, space, time and crime are analyzed.
