component of the definition of default (the EA Opinion).⁶ 1.5 P17/18 set out the PRAs proposed approach to implementing these three products. The PRA proposed to: set a 0% relative materiality threshold and a zero absolute materiality threshold for retail exposures; PS7/19 Credit risk: the definition of default The assessment of the materiality refers to the past due part of the exposure and not to the total exposure and for the purpose of recognition of default the counting of the 90 (or 180) days shall start only once the past due amount becomes material. If the past due part of exposure continues to be material for 90 (or 180) consecutive days, a default shall then be considered to have occurred. Material exposure in
