struggles over belonging are underpinned by the sociocultural politics of difference and played out across the intersections of racialized, ethnic, socioeconomic, religious, sexual, and gender identities and affiliations. This means that the experiences of inclusion/belonging or exclusion/not belonging are directly related to sociocultural identities and their differential social positionings. belonging, also known as double belonging, refers to the idea that individuals can belong to more than one religious tradition. While this is often seen as a common reality in regions such as Asia with its many religions, religious scholars have begun to discuss multiple religion belonging with respect to religious traditions such as Judaism,
